Are you looking for Internet Resources or Ideas for any novels you are studying this year?

Here are some good sites with lots of resources on specific novels. If the novel you are studying is not featured in this addition, contact Ron Nordstrom and I would be glad to research websites on your novel. (see contact information below the banner above)

An excellent place to start research on a novel is:
<http://www.educeth.ch/english/readinglist/>

Of Mice and Men – John Steinbeck

Did you know?

The title of the novel came from a 1785 poem by Robert Burns called To A Mouse, On Turning Her Up In Her Nest With The Plough

Find this and other interesting facts at:

<http://www.educeth.ch/english/readinglist/steinbeckj/ofmice.html>

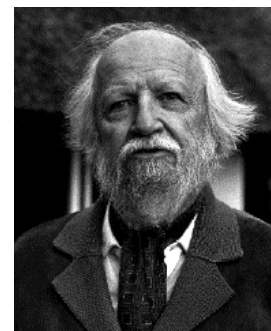

A good site which includes chapter summaries, student activities, character notes, theme discussion, exam topics, questions with answers, fact sheets, chapter by chapter idioms and vocabulary, plot, background information, and information about the movie.

Lord of the Flies – William Golding

Lord of the Flies

<http://www.educeth.ch/english/readinglist/goldingw/index.html#lordflies>

You will find a novel summary, chapter summaries, teachers guide, lesson plans, vocabulary, metaphor analysis, essay questions, test paper, theme discussion, character analysis, symbolism, a map of the island, and more. The map is an artist's rendition and is really quite good.

Lord of the Flies – Lo Fat Version

<http://www.homework-online.com/lotf/index.asp>

Find chapter summaries, character analysis, information on theme and symbolism, important quotes, and a map.
